

QNO 5 "Concept of Islam"
Ans

The concept of worship in Islam is different from that found elsewhere in religions, so it is less ambiguous. Usually, worship is understood to mean the observance of certain customs of prayer, fasting, charitable giving and other "good" works. For muslims, however, worship is much more — it's everyone's life. Like many islamic scholars have said. "Worship is an all-encompassing term those internal and external expression and human actions it please Allah." In other words worship is what is done in obedience to the will of Allah.

"Objectives of Islam"

Therefore, what Almighty Allah has said in the verse quoted above actually means that He created these two species "so that they will be thankful only to Allah and so no other being that they will follow the commandments of Allah only, that they will follow commandments of Allah only."
